EMERGENCY KITS: WHEN IT COUNTS!

The Federal Office of Civil Protection and Disaster Assistance (BBK) advises to acquire a crank radio. The reason for this is foreseeable and unforeseeable dangers, for example, from floods, heavy snowfall with avalanches or large-scale, prolonged power outages. As the main warning and information medium, often only a radio remains. This must be able to be operated with an accumulator or a battery.

The Albrecht DR112 and DR114 crank radios are suitable for this purpose. In addition to all other requirements, they also have an integrated solar panel so that they can function without an external power supply. At the same time, the digital radios can also be used as a PowerBank to charge smartphones and other USB devices.
